The Smell of the Woods in Summer

The tangy smell of the pines rode with the forest breeze as I walked into the depths of the darkened forest. The summer sun burst down upon the land, but its rays couldn't penetrate the cool, sweet woods. The pungent odors of moss and lichen filled my nostrils. The air was thick with spicy odors of trees and plants. I felt surrounded with no room to breathe because of the potent smell of vegetation around me, but I continued to walk on. Suddenly, the forests opened up to a bright, golden meadow that was dotted with flowers. The air was so wild and free that I wanted to run barefoot and pick flowers. The wind rippled through the golden blades of grass and the fragrance of the flowers touched my mind. I thought of faintly scented perfumes and sweet smelling soaps. The air was electric and every beautiful fragrance in the world filled it.

Writing Prompt:

Our sense of smell can vividly bring back a memory or create an impression. Think of a place that you associate with certain smells. Using your memories and sensory impressions of those smells, along with details that appeal to your other senses, write a paragraph identifying and describing that place. Make your writing so precise and vivid that your readers will smell that place and feel that they are there just as clearly as you are there when you remember that special place.

Make sure your paragraph:

- Includes four or more details that appeal to the sense of smell
- Includes four or more details that appeal to the other senses (taste, touch, sight, sound, and movement)
- Has a strong topic sentence that draws the reader into the paragraph by appealing to the sense of smell
- Flows smoothly and tells how that place makes you feel
- Demonstrates a mastery of spelling and punctuation
